

Inspiration Defined

Elizabeth Dillow | Master Supply List

To prepare for Elizabeth's class, please gather the following:

- any favorite patterned paper, cardstock, and embellishments you love and have on hand—this is not the opportunity to use something you don't really like just because you have it already. Although, inspiration is 9/10ths love!
- any style notebook or sketchbook for collecting ideas: the form is less important than the action of using it!
- a library card would be a handy supply if you have access to your local library for brief scans of books related to color and design.

Elizabeth's note: Why so few supplies? Well, the very essence of inspiration is highly personal; the same object or idea will inspire each of us differently, so it's hard to prescribe a specific set of papers or embellishments to use for this class. While you are most welcome to draw inspiration from any of the layouts I've created to include in the course content, this time around you'll be encouraged to choose materials you have on hand as you're inspired by specific colors, designs, and concepts for our weekly assignments. If at any time you're feeling lost about how to translate inspiration into an actual scrapbook page, there will be plenty of help from me and from other class members in the forum to assist you in choosing papers, embellishments, or other products, I promise! An open exchange of ideas and assistance will be extremely important and highly encouraged!
