May Flaum | Master Supply List: None!

Important note: I am not one of those scrappers who like to take classes where I copy someone else's project. There's nothing wrong with that, it's just not what I like.

The main reason I dislike that is because when I complete the project and look at it, while it looks beautiful, it doesn't look like it's mine; it doesn't look like something I would naturally create so it always feels like this foreign object in my house. Instead, I like to take classes where I learn a new technique/ability or classes where I complete a project that is meaningful to me. This way, I still learn and create something new, but I create a project that's completely mine and that feels authentic to me.

I also have more scrapbooking supplies than I will use in my lifetime so I don't want to have to buy new ones for a class. I'd rather use what I have.

Due to these preferences, none of the classes I prepare for BPS have supply requirements. They can all be done by using your own stash, your own style, and your own choices.
